Dear [redacted]

25X1

You will recall that we discussed when I saw you last the possibility of sending some of your editors to Washington for re-orientation. I believe that this is highly advisable and that we would not be consistent to bring editors home from overseas posts for reorientation and completely disregard our field stations in the United States. I am fully aware of the fact that it would be very difficult for you to spare anyone at this time. However, at any time in the future you feel you can spare an editor who has not served a tour of duty in Washington before, or who has not served in the past two years, I will arrange for a tour of 30 to 60 days.

The fourth quarter of each fiscal year usually finds a little extra money floating around which must be spent before July 1. Since we never know what next year's budget will allow, it is advisable to work as many of these small transportation problems as possible in at this time. Please give this your consideration in planning any such reorientation program.

Sincerely,

L. A. White
